Guns Killers CONCLAVE (PvP) 16.8 16.8 134.4 168.0 (80%) 16.8 16.8 302.4 336.0 (90%) Horror is Stalker's calling card. He shoots arrows that can behead. Dread is a deadly hunting bow that shoots with an arrow blade, serving as Stalker's signature weapon. This bow sports a large amount of slash damage, the highest critical chance of a stat corresponds to only Lenz and Kuva Chakchurr, and high chance status, causing many shots to inflict bleeding procs. These weapons can be sold for 7500 7500. These weapons primarily damage Slash. Advantages: Disadvantages: Low impact and puncture damage - less effective against shields and armor. The arrows have travel time with a small arc. Draws from a rare sniper pool of ammunition. The Weapon LoadoutsEdit Dread plan fell to the stalker. Is it also included in What Stalker? Kit for 800 on the market. Drop Chance Expected almost guaranteed main drawing 37.94% 2 - 3 kills 14 ± 5 kills Expected refers to the total number of attempts a player can expect to get at least one of each drop associated with the relevant values. Almost guaranteed refers to the total number of attempts a player must receive 99%, 99.9%, and a 99.99% chance of getting at least one of each drop associated with the relevant values. For more information on how these figures were obtained, please visit here. All chargers (guns) are able to keep their charge during the sprint. As long as the user starts to charge, they can finish the charge while they still sprint. This gives more mobility to the user. An example of this is charging the weapon from behind the cover and then running into the room and archery as soon as the enemy is seen. The use of elevators and the opening of co-operative doors does not abolish the fee; however, hacking consoles and opening lockers will. Sliding when you're about to hit the ground (from any height) is very helpful for maintaining your charge rather than losing it rolling. While the wall move will not lift the charge, the grip of the edge will be. The maximum of Point Strike increases the critical chance of dread to 125%, guaranteeing normal critical moments and as the update is 13.5, the 25% chance of proc Orange critical, roughly double the critical damage. In the conclave, Dread will apply a 2-second Slash proc to the target, each tick damage takes 3 to 5 damage, depending on the level of charge at the shot. Note that this passive is not consistent, and can occur at the nearest misses to targets as well as direct hits. Hunter Munitions stands out on this weapon due to its very high critical randomness. This is a dubious value though, since the weapon will already be a consistent proc Slash with high build status. The speed of fire increases the speed of charge, so Speed Trigger helps a lot. Alternatives to Shred or Vile Acceleration, as they all allow Charge the onion quickly. Dread can stagger ancient on every blow, even with uncharged shots, it's quite quite on long infected/void missions where high levels of ancients become a problem to solve. Thunderbolt and Multishot can add a devastating (albeit weaker against higher-level enemies) to the AoE effect to combat multiple targets. Dread is unique in that its string glows. The light runs along the line to the point of attractions. This light glows reddish when it is drawn. Unlike other bows, Dread, using primarily Slash Damage, uses arrows with a curved blade for the tip, as opposed to the pointed head puncture-based Paris (Prime), or blunt mace-like head impact-based Cernos (Prime). When drawing an onion, the blade of the arrow rotates from horizontal to vertical, which means that fully charged shots are shots with their blades vertically. This corresponds to the code description, which describes the decapitation of arrows, as the horizontal blade is better suited for decapitation. Dread has a cylindrical object mounted next to the handle. Although its purpose is unknown, it may be a laser sight, rangefinder, or other form of optical assistance. Despite the fact that Dread is called the hallmark of Stalker, it is strangely available for purchase with a rotating stock Darvo. Never explained where he got this stock of Stalker's weapons, nor where horror, despair and hatred are produced. Dread's hands don't move when the arrow is pushed back; Only the string does. Update 22.12 Rank of Excellence increased from 0 to 5. The charging speed dropped from 1 to 0.5 seconds. Update 8.0 Latest Update: Hotfix 23.10.4 See alsoEdit Bow Dread in Warframe is a great no-frills weapon that lets you focus on shooting arrows without a lot of extra frills. The best part is, this particular weapon is relatively easy to obtain. If you want to master Warframe, how to get dread is something worth knowing. As the DreadAs mentioned, Dread is a no-frills bow. It focuses on simple, quiet attacks that do a lot of slash damage. Onion also has one of the highest critical hit chances in all of Warframe. This emphasis on critical strikes, damage reduction, and nothing more makes it a very good, targeted weapon that is good in almost all situations. So how do you get a dread? Good question. The easiest way to pick up this popular bow is to just go and spend some good old hard currency. If you drop 800 platinum on the market for What Stalker? The layer that appeared in Update 7, 7, could be yours. The layer also comes with desperation, hatred and the extension of the color collector. But where is the fun in this? Why spend real money when you can take the fight to the gun owner directly and pick up the plan from his source. Fight Stalker If you want to pick up dread's plan, you need to kill Stalker. Unlike some big enemies, Stalker does not appear as a mission boss. Instead, as the name suggests, it will come looking for you once you have met certain conditions. After killing some bosses during the Murder Mission, you will receive a Death Sign. This sign will attract Stalker to you. It does not appear immediately, instead appears in a future mission randomly to take you. But rest assured, once you have a Death Sign, he will be on the hunt. When he finally makes his presence known, watch out. This mortal enemy doesn't mess around, and it's for blood. If you interact with Stalker and you manage to defeat him, there is a near 40% chance that he will drop the plan for Dread. This means you can expect to kill Stalker two to three times before you see the plan dread show. That is, if you are particularly lucky. With a drawing in hand, you can create it relatively easily. You'll need 15,000 credits, 6 morphine, 900 circuits, 750 polymer beams and 900 plastics. If you have raw materials, it takes twelve hours to complete the process. You can always pay 45 platinum to rush things together, but good things come to those waiting. Once completed, you'll have one of the best general purpose bows in Warframe. Dread is relatively easy to find that combined with its damage potential makes it a very valuable weapon to hunt down.
